We suddenly find ourselves in an unprecedented situation. All of us are being affected in some way. But, as the shock wears off, by working together we will find our way through these trying times and be stronger for it in the long run. At MPH we are monitoring the rapidly changing legal landscape and working diligently to make sure our clients and friends are informed and prepared for what lies ahead.

We remain open and will remain fully functioning in a virtual office setting if need be. Although jury trials have been postponed, Texas courts generally remain open for e-filings and telephonic hearings. MPH recognizes you or your businesses may need legal consultation now more than ever, and we are here for you. If you have questions about how to navigate your business through this COVID-19 crisis, have other legal questions or needs, or simply want to exchange ideas or catch up, we would love to hear from you. Our attorneys are available to arrange video conferences or can support you by phone and email:
